3, Asking Yes/No Questions

With forms of be, put the verb before the subject:

Are you sometimes homesick?

With all other verbs, follow this pattern: auxiliary do + subject + base form of the verb

Do you like Chinese food?

Using the descriptions below, ask your classmates (or, think of your acquaintances, family members or friends) questions about themselves. Write only one name on each line. Try to write a different name on each line.

Find someone who. . .

- is sometimes homesick _____
- likes Chinese food. _____
- drinks coffee every day. _____
- is married. _____

4. Forming Adjective Clauses with Who

An adjective clause is a group of words that acts like an adjective. It tells you more about a person or thing.

- Maria is in my class and she drinks coffee every day. Maria, who is in my class, drinks coffee every day.

Choose some people in your class. Write a sentence about each of them based on information from your list. Here are more examples:

- Byong Woo, who sits next to me, is married.
- Sergei, who loves pizza, is a new friend.
- Yumiko, who wears glasses, has beautiful dark hair.

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____
4. _____
5. _____

5. Forming Wh- Questions:

Who? What ...? Where? When? Why? How?

With forms of be, put the question word first, and then verb + subject: What is your name?

With all other verbs, follow this pattern: question word + auxiliary do + subject Where do you live?

Make these cues into questions:

1. when / birthday? _____
2. where / come from? _____
3. how big / family? _____
4. where / work? _____
5. what / hobbies? _____
6. what / do / on weekends? _____
7. what / favorite book or movie? _____
8. why / like / this book or movie? _____
